Central States Conference on the Teaching of Foreign Languages

What is CSCTFL?

CSCTFL promotes the study of foreign languages at all levels of instruction by assuming a proactive leadership role and by providing service to all foreign language professionals.

Founded in 1969, the Central States Conference on the Teaching of Foreign Languages (CSCTFL) is an organization which serves the fourteen Midwestern states principally through its annual conference.

This conference stimulates research in second language learning and teaching and provides a forum for the exchange of ideas and thoughts about foreign language teaching.

You can be part of this process through regular attendance at the annual conference. In addition, you can join the Advisory Council, which offers opportunities for professional involvement.
